JUNIOR STOCKMAN'S AWARD – The five highest placing contestants in the overall individual scores will be interviewed by a committee of three officials experienced in beef, sheep, and swine. The interview will consist of questions on management, health, showing, and current event problems concerning the livestock industry such as prices and animals' rights. Fifty points will be issued by each of the judges.

The idea of the interview is to evaluate the contestant's abilities to give a presentation and their knowledge of the livestock industry. The score from the interviews will be added to the total judging scores. The five contestants with the highest overall scores will receive the Junior Stockman Awards.
